SECTION-C

Anisha, a mid-level manager in a tech startup responsible for handling client communications, recently, developed a software solution for a high-profile client along with her team. However, upon testing, she discovered several bugs that could potentially disrupt the client’s business operations. The product launch was just days away, and the organisation’s CEO instructed her to deliver a presentation on the software’s benefits, with no mention of the issues. Anisha knew that addressing the bugs will delay the launch, which could harm the company’s reputation and lead to financial losses eventually raising an eye-brow towards her job. However, ignoring the problem might lead to bigger setbacks for the client and strain the relationship.

Anisha was torn between adhering to her ethical values of honesty and transparency in communication and protecting the company's short-term interests. She was concerned about the potential long-term consequences of misleading the client. Her dilemma deepened as the CEO pressured her to prioritize the company’s success over the potential risks for the client.

Q.4. Attempt all parts of the following:

(1×5=5)

- 4(a) 1. How would you approach the situation if you were in Anisha's position? Apply relevant ethical principles and communication techniques to handle the dilemma.

OR

- 4(b) Analyze the potential consequences of Anisha's decision to either disclose or conceal the software bugs from the client. What are the long-term implications for both the client and her company in terms of trust and reputation?
