SECTION-C

StarTech Components, a Bengaluru-based electronic parts manufacturer, has secured a multimillion-dollar deal to supply semiconductor components to clients in Taiwan, Japan, and South Korea. The agreement involves monthly shipments from India over six months. While the order boosts StarTech's international profile, the company faces intense logistical challenges. Shipments are routed through Singapore and Busan ports, where congestion and custom delays are frequent. Clients in Japan and South Korea insist on timely delivery with penalty clauses for delays. Moreover, each country has specific labeling, packaging, and quality compliance norms that require customization. Internally, StarTech's documentation process is manual and prone to errors, often resulting in container holdups. The firm also lacks a dedicated global logistics team. Rising fuel costs, volatile freight rates, and limited access to real-time tracking add to the complexity. Senior management has tasked the logistics team with building a seamless supply chain that ensures timely delivery, adheres to compliance norms, and protects profit margins. The firm is also considering adopting cloud-based logistics software and outsourcing customs clearance to third-party experts.

Q.4. Attempt all parts of the following:

(2×10=20)

- 4(a) Classify the logistical challenges StarTech faces in managing East Asian exports. How should the company restructure its supply chain to reduce delays?
- 4(b) Develop digital and strategic interventions that StarTech can adopt to enhance compliance, tracking, and documentation.
