SECTION-CParle-G - The Blueprint Ahead

Parle-G, India's largest-selling biscuit brand, faces unprecedented challenges in 2024. With over 80% market share in the glucose biscuit category, the brand has maintained its ₹5 price point for nearly two decades while competitors like Britannia Tiger and ITC Sunfeast have positioned themselves as premium alternatives at ₹10-15.

Recent market research reveals changing consumer preferences: urban millennials seek healthier options with organic ingredients, while rural consumers (60% of Parle-G's sales) remain price-sensitive. The company's traditional distribution through 1.5 million retail outlets is being challenged by e-commerce platforms and modern retail formats.

Parle Products is considering three strategic options:

- (1) Launching a premium variant "Parle-G Gold" at ₹12 with added nutrients,
- (2) Maintaining status quo with cost optimization, or
- (3) Creating separate rural and urban product lines. The decision must consider rising wheat prices (30% increase), inflation pressures, and competitive threats from regional players offering similar products at ₹3-4.

Manufacturing costs have increased 25% while the brand cannot raise prices without losing its core positioning as "India's affordable nutrition."

Q.4. Attempt all parts of the following:(2×10=20)*4(a) Utilize

Parle-G's current 4Ps strategy and propose a comprehensive marketing mix redesign for the next 3 years. Justify your recommendations using appropriate marketing frameworks and discuss implementation challenges with risk mitigation strategies.

4(b) Explain how Parle-G's current distribution system (1.5 million retail outlets) is being challenged by online shopping and modern stores. Suggest a new distribution and advertising strategy to compete with Britannia and ITC while keeping costs low.
